

ABSTRACT

United States of America as the main actor in many cases of world politics constellation has done a number of double standard politics for preserving its certain national interest. For a century, Middle East has been one of the most focussed object for United States foreign policies. This research aims to explain the United States foreign policy toward Mohamed Morsi Coup in 2013, which tries to answer why United States supporting Mohamed Morsi coup. United States supporting through funding towards Morsi opposition (Liberal and Secular), to wiggle and bring down the government Morsi and the Muslim Brotherhood. And the United States in support of the Egyptian military action, with no mention of military action as coup. United States never calls Egypt case as a coup and still continuing its foreign aid to Egypt's new governement (military government). This action by the United States to safeguard its interests in Egypt such as the political interests and economic interests. Wherein when rising Mursi of the party the FJP (Freedom and Justice Party), which was also the political wing of the Muslim Brotherhood organization, becoming its own concerns for the United States and allies, most important Israel. Therefore, the United States supported plan to the coup.

Keywords: Foreign Policy, National Interest, Coup, United States, Egypt, Arab Spring, Middle East.