

ABSTRACT

This thesis discusses the resolution of the food crisis carried out by the World Food Programme (WFP) in helping Sierra Leone. In this issue, the food crisis that occurred in Sierra Leone was the impact of the Ebola virus that attacked most food-producing regions in the country. Many Sierra Leoneans have died, causing children and pregnant women in the country to experience malnutrition or acute malnutrition. Here by using Protected Relief and Recovery Operation (PRRO), WFP is helping the people of Sierra Leone to restore lives and livelihoods that have been destroyed by Ebola.

This thesis aims to explain the role carried out by WFP to fight against the issue of hunger in the world in accordance with the SDGs 2, which is trying to get the world without hunger or Zero Hunger in 2030. In addressing the food crisis issue experienced by Sierra Leone, through the PRRO, WFP has proven its role as IO.
