

ABSTRACT

This study is perform to analize whether GDP per capita, interest rate of deposit (Rupiah) to US Dollar and International Interest Rate (LIBOR) have influence toward deposit demand in foreign money in national private bank of Indonesia during 1985-2012.

From result it found that he factors that are mentioned above capable to explain deposit demand of foreign currency variable in national private bank of Indonesia during 1985-2004 amount to 95,1%, whereas the remnant of 4,9% is explained by other variable.

GDP per capita, exchange rate of Rupiah to US Dollar, and International interest rate (LIBOR) have positive influence toward deposit demand of foreign currency in national private bank of Indonesia during 1985-2012 where interest rate of deposit (Rupiah) have negative influence.