ABSTRACT

This research aims to analyze factors influencing the Locally-generated revenue in Banjarnegara Regency. This research used secondary data in the form of time series and cross section data from annual data over the period 2007-2014. Data of this research obtained from The Central Statistics Agency (CSA) and the Integrated Licensing Services Office (ILSO) of Banjarnegara Regency. Data collecting technique in this research used was documentation method and literature review. The analysis tool used was Multiple Linear Regression

Based on the analysis obtained that partially variable Gross Regional Domestic Product and Domestic Capital Investment were positive and significant influence on the Locally-generated revenue while variable total population was positive and not significant influence on the Locally-generated revenue. Simultaneously, Gross Regional Domestic Product, total population and Domestic Capital Investment significant influence on the Locally-generated revenue with number of F-count 306.0166 and significant 0,000. The number of R-Square as many 0.967. It showed that Gross Regional Domestic Product, total population and Domestic Capital Investment simultaneously had an influence on the Locally-generated revenue as much 96,7%.

Keywords: Locally-generated revenue, Gross Regional Domestic Product, total population, Domestic Capital Investment.